QAnon refers to a set of far-right, conspiratorial ideologies initially promoted in 2017 on the 4chan internet message board. A central narrative of QAnon has been that a powerful group of elite, liberal members of the Democratic Party engage in morally reprehensible practices, but that former President Donald Trump was prosecuting them. Five studies investigated the Twitter network influence and connectivity of accounts promoting QAnon propaganda circa the 2020 U.S. presidential election. Evidence of large-scale coordination or "astroturfing" in promoting QAnon propaganda was observed, in contrast to strictly "grassroots" activities of citizens acting independently, with Russia as a possible actor.
