Unsettling Startup Ecosystems: Geographies, Mobilities, and Transnational Practices in the Palestinian and Israeli Startup Ecosystems

This transnational project, conducted by Dr. Steven Fraiberg (MSU), Arees Bishara (Tel Aviv University), and Aseel Khatib (Independent Scholar), focuses on Palestinian entrepreneurs in an emerging high-tech ecosystem located in the occupied Palestinian territory...

To capture the complexity of the issues, this project traces the trajectories of Palestinian entrepreneurs living in a region that has been fragmented and balkanized by series of checkpoints, policies, other structures that sharply restrict mobility...

A transnational and multilingual team has been assembled to accomplish these aims. This collaborative approach is grounded in the notion that it takes a village to study a village—or ecological system—with each perspective and background allowing for a broader, richer, and more complex mapping.
